“BOTH the scale and rapidity of these cuts are way beyond even the Thatcher cuts. They are entirely without precedent in the history of local government. They will cause wholesale closure of key public services. Virtually all support for Haringey schools will be axed and schools left to fend for themselves while at the same time their budgets are cut.

“The government’s claim that schools have been protected is a lie. I appeal to all your readers to support our protest march on January 17 and to put the TUC national demonstration on March 26 in their diaries now.”

– Tony Brockman, secretary of Haringey NUT

Council's £9k splurge on seating

Condemnation:
Justin Hinchcliffe has criticised the decision to spend £9,195 on chairs
for council meetings

BOSSSES at Haringey Council have shelled out more than £9,000 of taxpayers' money on new chairs for councillors to sit on at meetings despite facing an £87million budget hole.

The authority has been criticised for forking out a total of £9,195 for 100 new chairs to line the council chamber.

Justin Hinchcliffe, the chairman of Haringey Conservatives, accused Labour councillors of hypocrisy, saying they preferred to cut vital services and blame the government.

He told the Advertiser: "Hypocritical Labour councillors wring their hands about having to make cuts to services, but they aren't interested in cutting waste or red tape. They prefer to cut vital services in order to blame the coalition government. This decision shows how they always put themselves first rather than the people of Haringey they are meant to serve."

Former Conservative councillor Alan Dobbie added: "The existing chairs were in a very good condition and didn't need replacing. This is a shameful waste of taxpayers' cash. What service has Haringey cut to pay for these unnecessary chairs?"

The news comes as more than 1,000 council staff members have been told their jobs are at risk and cuts are being planned across many services. Campaigners have warned the most vulnerable in the borough will be hit the worst.

But a council spokeswoman defended the expenditure.

She said: "The decision to buy the chairs was made months before the government announced its austerity measures, leaving the council with a significant budget gap to bridge.

"The decision to purchase was due to safety concerns with the older ones which did not comply with British Standards and were becoming unstable. The council tested the price before buying to ensure value for money and durability. The chairs are used frequently by members of the public attending events, such as citizenship ceremonies, as well as by councillors, and safety is a prime concern of the council."

The Professional Development Centre is at risk of closure if cuts go unchallenged

By Lucy Purdy

SCHOOLS across Haringey could be "left to fend for themselves" if support staff whose jobs have been earmarked for redundancy are lost, union leaders have warned.

Some 51 members of staff who provide crucial support for schools have been told that their jobs are likely to be cut from the end of March in order to save money. This is virtually the entire staff of the Professional Development Centre, based in Downhills Park Road, Tottenham, many of whom are former teachers who have clocked up years of local knowledge and experience which they pour into improving the borough's schools.

The posts have been earmarked for the chop by Haringey Council chiefs battling to plug a budget black hole of £87million over the next three years, following cuts imposed by the coalition government.

But Tony Brockman, secretary of Haringey National Union of Teachers secretary, has warned the move could leave schools gravely under-resourced at a time when their own budgets are being slashed, beginning with a ten per cent cut in the Area Based Grant announced last year. "This government simply does not understand how school improvement works," Mr Brockman told the Advertiser.

"They are cutting all but the most minimal support for schools in Haringey. They assume that a school which has difficulties will be capable of identifying and commissioning support from a private market which barely exists. Instead of supporting schools, their policy risks school failure which will only be identified after children's education has been damaged. Their approach runs counter to all research and evidence on school improvement.

"It will dissipate the expertise and local experience of highly respected

'These cuts are akin to a reverse Robin Hood - stealing from the poorest to protect the rich' school professionals in Haringey."

School improvement staff in Haringey run training courses for newly qualified teachers, provide after-school study support for pupils struggling to keep up and help schools deal with problems such as bullying, drugs and alcohol. They also help pupils with special educational needs and advise teachers on how to tackle the huge challenge of an ethnically diverse borough; advising on how to improve attainment of black and minority ethnic children and those who don't speak English as a first language. They also help teachers deal with vulnerable pupils recently arrived in the UK, including refugees from war-torn countries and asylum-seeking children.

CHILDREN'S skills in numeracy and literacy could also suffer if the posts are lost. Among those destined for the chop are members of maths and literacy teams who currently work in every school in Haringey to bolster teaching and learning in these key areas.

And while government schools watchdog Ofsted highlights problems following inspections every three years, Haringey school improvement staff work closely with headteachers, teachers and governors to flag up problems before they escalate.

Mr Brockman said: "Ofsted only pick up the pieces after things have happened, when it's too late. But school improvement officers look at things such as staff turnover and internal exam results, identifying concerns and feeding that information to the council which operates a traffic-light system. Then schools are given a special programme of support.

"This is clearly so much better than waiting until things have gone completely and utterly pear-shaped."

Unions in Haringey, including the NUT, Unison, UCATT and Unite, have organised a march and a rally on

ALL of the following support would be lost if the proposed 51 redundancies at the Professional Development Centre go ahead:

- Training courses for newly qualified teachers
- Quality Continued Professional Development for teachers and school leaders
- Initiatives to promote healthy schools and energy management
- Out-of-hours study support for needy pupils
- Advice for young people on sex and relationships
- Expertise to help schools deal with bullying, drugs and alcohol

- Support with ICT
- Training for teachers who specialise in helping children read
- Projects which have set up French and Spanish teaching in 95 per cent of Haringey's primary schools
- Projects which involve parents in their child's learning
- Advice and support which prepares schools for Ofsted inspections
- Specialist subject support in maths, English and science
- Training for school staff in moderating assessments

- Support for special needs co-ordinators and staff working with conditions such as Down's syndrome and dyslexia
- Advice on improving the attainment of black and minority ethnic children and those with English as a second language
- Support for schools helping newly arrived pupils and refugee and asylum-seeking pupils
- Support for parents from ethnic-minority communities
- Help for schools to promote community languages

Under threat: The Professional Development Centre

Monday to draw attention to the effect of these cuts on public services, such as schools, care homes and libraries. They will appeal to councillors before a meeting at 7pm during which key decisions on budget will be made.

Campaigners will gather in Ducketts Common, opposite Turnpike Lane Tube station, at 5pm and march through Wood Green toward Haringey Civic Centre. Organisers are urging anyone concerned about cuts to Haringey's public services to take part.

Sean Fox, Haringey Unison branch secretary, said: "The cuts are akin to a reversal of Robin Hood, stealing from the poorest to protect the richest. Finding £46million from council budgets could only ever be achieved by withdrawing frontline services so the government agenda of localism and choice is a lie."

Councillor Lorna Reith, cabinet member for children and young people, said: "Central government cuts have forced a number of redundancies at the Professional Development Centre. Within the constraints of the much-reduced resources from government we are restructuring our school improvement services to ensure we can still effectively deliver our statutory duties, including work with newly qualified teachers, and will continue to offer support to vulnerable children and to schools struggling to meet their targets. For the time being, the PDC will remain the base for school improvement work."

Playing cupid: Laura-Jane Filotrani tries to pair up compatible singletons

By Elena Andreou

A SINGLE woman desperate to find love has set up her own agency after dating sites failed to pair her with a perfect match.

Laura-Jane Filotrani from Muswell Hill spent five years using various internet matchmaking services looking for love with no successful result. Each January she joined a different agency with renewed hope but became "totally depressed" with the men on offer.

The 41-year-old journalist, who is known as LJ, told the Advertiser: "I found the whole internet dating process very invasive and depressing. For it to work for you, you really have to put in the time to check emails and profiles every day and, as a working professional, I just didn't have the time to commit."

Fed up with negative experiences and harsh rejections, she set up LJ Introductions.

Miss Filotrani meets and interviews every potential member, spending at least an hour putting her journalistic skills to use, before they sign up to her site.

"It's almost like a therapy session," she said. "It's more about understanding the reasons why the person is still single as opposed to things they are looking for in a potential partner. I question them on past relationships and why they broke down and even on parental relationships."

After introducing members to each other she no longer plays a role in the dating process and leaves it to the matches to decide their future potential. The site boasts more than 50 members.

"The members are relaxed because I've already met the people," explained Miss Filotrani. "It's as if I am a friend just casually introducing them to someone I think they'd get on with."

Tube death linked to fatal stabbing

A MAN who was killed by a Tube train at Finsbury Park station on New Year's Day has been named as 23-year-old Czech-born Jiri Stuchlik.

Police are linking his death under a southbound Victoria Line train with the murder of 27-year-old Czech national Jitka Nahodilová who was stabbed to death at a house in Barnet the following day.

Mr Stuchlik died just before 4.20pm on January 1 as a result of serious head injuries after hitting the train. Police say they are treating his death as non-suspicious.

Forensic teams were last week combing the house in Hampden Way, Friern Barnet, for clues after Miss Nahodilová was found at 9.40am on January 2 having suffered multiple stab wounds.

She was born in the Czech Republic and worked as a deputy manager for a European clothing firm. In a poignant statement, her father Lubomir Nahodi said: "Jitka was full of life, a kind, considerate and loving daughter."

Both deaths are being investigated by the Metropolitan Police's Homicide and Serious Crime Command and anyone with information is urged to come forward.

Detective Inspector Liz Baker said: "This is a tragic case and our hearts go out to everybody involved. We would like to thank the embassy of the Czech Republic for their assistance in our investigation."

Inquests into both deaths are set to be opened this week at Barnet Coroner's Court.

Anyone with information should contact the incident room on 020 7321 7228. If you wish to remain anonymous call Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

‘There is stress, but knowing you’ve saved someone’s life is such a buzz’

LUCY PURDY goes along on the emergency rounds with the London Ambulance Service

AN EMACIATED man lying on a pile of old cushions limply lifts his head and looks at us as we walk through the door. A pile of dirty clothes and a few pieces of rubbish are the only possessions to punctuate the bare concrete floor, and the stiflingly warm flat reeks of stale cigarette smoke.

I’m out on the road with a London Ambulance Service crew on a freezing Thursday just before Christmas and slowly realising that, like so many of the patients they see, there is a lot more to this call-out than first meets the eye.

The report which flashed up on the ambulance’s computer described a 55-year-old unable to get out of bed, but this man can’t even tell us his name or when he last ate or drank. He only repeats: “I’m unwell, I’m sick,” in a strong Jamaican accent before slumping his stick-thin body back against the bed in resignation.

We discover from his notes that he is HIV positive and has not been taking his medication. A concerned care worker raised the alarm after not hearing from him for three days.

“He’s in a bad way,” says Dave Brennecke, duty officer at Bounds Green station and one of the two paramedics I joined on the 12-hour shift.

“Shall we pop you up to the hospital mate?” he asks. “Yes sir,” replies the man, opening one eye and offering a weary grin, before Dave clambers from the ambulance to hand over our charge to an overflowing A&E department at North Middlesex University Hospital.

Uniformed in green and full of banter despite the urgency of their jobs, Dave and his colleague, ex-military man Lyndon Ashurst, are manning just one of the 13 ambulances based at stations in Bounds Green, Edmonton and Tottenham. Battling time-wasters, traffic, bad weather, tight response targets and even physical abuse, they get through their shifts on a combination of sheer hard work and camaraderie in even the bleakest of situations.

At 8.17am, we’re called to a 22-year-old woman in labour in Tottenham. My heart races as the sirens blare but Dave and Lyndon, remain relaxed as we dodge rush-hour traffic en route to Great Cambridge Road. The young Polish woman and having painful contractions but she was sent home from the Homerton Hospital in Hackney at 4am to wait for the labour to start. Dave is concerned that she has discharged some yellow fluid – guessing it may be down to an infection which could mean the baby is at risk.

“Breathe for me, Maria. Nice deep breaths,” he says in a authoritative voice, helping to calm the woman and the relatives anxiously buzzing around her. “Get together everything you and Maria will need and we’ll get you along to the hospital,” he tells her English-speaking sister.

Paramedics also get a generous share of mundane calls: people feeling queasy, cuts and scrapes and even from motorists who are keen to augment their injuries for insurance pay-outs.

Lyndon recalled one of his personal favourites: “I went out to a guy complaining of bad pain in his rectum. There was no light in the room so I was there, staring up his rear end in the dark with a torch. He mentioned that his mates at work had recommended some cream to him so I asked him to bring over the tub.

“It turned out to be Deep Heat – they’d played a bit of a trick on him.”

THE role of a paramedic now involves much more than simply shipping people to and from hospital. They are trained to assess a patient’s condition and administer urgent, potentially life-saving treatment, including some drugs.

When we’re called to a house in Fore Street, Edmonton, to an overweight, asthmatic woman suffering from diarrhoea and breathing difficulties, Dave asks everyone in the room to be quiet. He crouches near the distressed Turkish woman for a few moments before saying: “I can hear a bubbling sound: she’s got water in her lungs.”

Working on the frontline means ambulance staff see first-hand the problems caused by poverty, cramped housing and unemployment and the difficulties facing non-English-speakers in accessing healthcare and social services. Only one of the eight patients we helped during the shift was a native English-speaker.

As the snow begins to fall and we wait for the ambulance to be wiped clean, we talk about patients who have stuck in their minds for more sombre reasons. “I’ve been called out to a couple of Broadwater Farm stabbings and shootings,” says Lyndon. “You realise afterwards that what you’ve seen is pretty horrific, but at the time you’re just focusing on doing your job. It’s after that the gallows humour comes in – it’s important to get it out of your system.

“The worst jobs for me are sick children. One of our colleagues was first on the scene when Baby P died. But if you’re ever reaching that stage where you can’t shake off a particularly bad job, there’s always someone to talk to.

“There is that stress, but knowing you’ve saved someone’s life is such a buzz.”

Teenage pair are charged with the theft of violin to the tune of £1.2m

Stolen: This Antonio Stradivarius antique violin, went missing after its owner stopped at a café in Euston station for a snack.

By Lucy Purdy

TWO teenagers from Tottenham have been charged with the theft of a £1.2million antique violin at Euston station in November.

The two boys, aged 14 and 16, who cannot be named for legal reasons, were arrested for the theft of a 300-year-old Antonio Stradivarius violin from a musician who had stopped to get something to eat from a café outside the station.

A public appeal for information, including a slot on BBC TV's Crimewatch show, led detectives to also charge 30-year-old John Maughan, of no fixed abode, with the theft of the antique instrument.

Detective Inspector Andy Rose said: "The victim arrived at Euston with her violin before stopping to get something to eat at the Pret A Manger café outside the station.

"At about 9pm, she noticed her black, rectangular violin case had been taken and immediately called police."

Contained within the case was a 1696 Antonio Stradivarius antique violin, a Peccatte bow valued at £62,000 and another bow made by the School Of Bazin, valued at more than £5,000.

Officers are continuing to appeal for information regarding the audacious theft and a £15,000 reward, issued by Lark Insurance Booking Group, on behalf of the victim, is also on offer for information leading to the safe recovery of the violin and bows. Police believe they are currently being held within the UK's traveller community.

DI Rose added: "The chief focus of our investigation remains to get these very precious items returned.

"Although they are extremely valuable, I want to stress that their sell-on value, in monetary terms, is practically nil because they are unique. It would be very easy for an arts or antique dealer to recognise them as stolen property, meaning they couldn't be sold for anything near to their true value.

"Our enquiries currently lead us to believe the items could be held within the travelling community and it is also possible that they will be offered for sale within the antique or musical trade, either in England or Ireland.

"I appeal to those who have these items, or anyone who has any knowledge of their whereabouts, to come forward so they can be returned to their rightful owner."

The teenagers have been released on bail while Maughan was remanded in custody. All three will appear at West London Magistrates' Court on Thursday, January 20.

Anyone with information should call British Transport Police on 0800 40 50 40.

£9,000 cost of sound lie

A COMPANY director who made up a professional body in order to issue sound certificates for buildings has been fined £9,000.

Mike Legon, a qualified acoustics engineer and sole director of A Sound Solution Ltd, pleaded guilty to dishonestly making a false statement in an accreditation certificate submitted to Haringey and Lewisham Building Control Services.

Legon claimed his company was accredited to carry out sound insulation testing when it was not.

Nilgun Canver, Haringey Council's cabinet member for neighbourhoods, said: "It's a serious matter if you buy a flat or a home and find that the walls are paper thin and the floors are not at all soundproofed. Accreditation to professional bodies is what gives you peace of mind when employing someone to check something out for you.

"Our vigilant officers may have saved households and housebuilders from getting a very raw deal."

Legon and A Sound Solution Ltd were each fined £1,000. Legon agreed to pay £7,000 towards costs.

Helping men look after their mental health

Support: Laurence Shrodier backs the campaign after receiving help

Lift The Weight campaign throws a lifeline to young men across north London who find it hard to cope

A MAN from Tottenham who developed schizophrenia after smoking cannabis from the age of 13 is backing a new campaign urging young men to look after their mental health.

Lift The Weight has been launched by Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust to encourage teenagers and young men to get help if they think they need it.

Laurence Shrodier, 30, was admitted to St Ann's Hospital, in St Ann's Road, Tottenham, after his regular cannabis use created feelings of intense paranoia.

He said: "I started smoking weed when I was 13. I just started doing it because my friends were. I didn't notice anything was wrong until I started to get really paranoid."

"I thought people were talking about me and I thought I could hear the television talking back to me when I was watching it."

"It's hazy now what happened but I just remember walking along the street in the middle of winter with only a T-shirt and shorts on."

"I was sent to St Ann's where they treated me with a combination of

"I'm going on holiday to visit relatives in Ghana soon which will be the first holiday I've had in years. I'm feeling positive about the future."

Mental Health Facts

- According to the Samaritans, men are three times more likely to take their own lives than women
- Suicide is the highest cause of death among young men, aged 15 to 34
- Research shows men aged 18 to 24 are five times as likely to take recreational drugs when worried compared to young women
- Research shows that men in this age group are half as likely as young women to talk to friends about their problems is the highest cause of death among men aged between 15 and 34.

Research also shows that men aged 18-24 are five times more likely than young women to take recreational drugs when worried and also much less likely to talk openly about their problems with friends.

The trust has created an area on its website giving young men access to information on stress management, including advice from sportsmen such as Barnet FC captain Anwar Uddin as well as Reading midfielder Jobi McAnuff and Queens Park Rangers player Mikel Leigertwood who both hail from Tottenham.

Maria Kane, chief executive of the mental health trust, said many young men turn to smoking, drugs and drinking to excess when they face problems. She said: "Men are under a lot of pressure sometimes to be strong and able to cope and many do not voice their emotions."

"We believe this campaign will also help reduce the stigma surrounding men's mental health, so young men know it's OK to ask for help."

Whittington closure boss quits post

THE NHS boss at the centre of The Whittington Hospital closure row has quit her post.

Rachel Tyndall has stepped down as chief executive of NHS North Central London to take up a new role dealing with cancer treatment in London.

Caroline Taylor, chief executive at NHS Croydon, will step into Ms Tyndall's shoes, becoming one of the leading figures at the helm of controversial plans to reconfigure hospital services in the area.

Ms Taylor has worked in the NHS for 14 years and was instrumental in the review of cardio-vascular services which led to the development of specialist centres.

She said: "I want to ensure we have strong leadership and an effective team in place to tackle the challenges we face. I want to build on the many strengths of the sector and look forward to meeting the local leaders and partners."

Bosses of the six sectors which make up NHS London are now steeling themselves for the transition to GP commissioning – the new way of organising the health service, as outlined in the coalition government's NHS White Paper.

The legislation, which is expected to begin its passage through parliament this week, has been heralded as a means to "liberate the NHS", placing power and budgets into the hands of trusted GPs rather than faceless bureaucrats. But critics insist the proposals will actually lead to the long-term destruction of the NHS, by putting commercial interests, not doctors, in the driving seat.

Members of the Defend The Whittington Hospital Coalition met at the Good Intent pub in Holloway on Monday to decide a plan of action to fight the cuts which have placed hospitals, including The Whittington, in Highgate, on the cutting table.

AN ELDERLY man was found lying seriously injured in the grounds of Alexandra Palace and carrying hundreds of pounds in cash.

Police launched a bid to identify the 67-year-old after a member of the public found him lying on the ground with serious head injuries on January 5.

Officers discovered he had more than £700 in cash when they were called to the junction of Alexandra Palace Way with Muswell Hill, at 11.15am. Now they are trying to find out what happened to the man who is now in a stable condition in hospital. His identity has not been publicised.

Mystery of man found injured at Ally Pally with £700 cash

Detective Sergeant Stuart Robinson of Haringey CID said: "We are appealing to the public to call us with any information that may help. We need to speak with anyone who was in the area on the morning of Wednesday, January 5, before 11.15am, particularly those who waited with the injured man until the ambulance arrived but left before speaking to officers. They may be able to tell us something that could help us piece together how this man came to sustain his injuries."

Anyone with information should call DS Robinson on 020 8345 0838.

Vocal-chord victory

The King's Speech (12A)

Dir: Tom Hooper

Starring: Colin Firth, Geoffrey
Rush, Helena Bonham Carter

IT'S a film which has the uplifting slogan, Best Of British Quality, running through it like a stick of Brighton rock.

Building up to George VI's nine-minute address to the nation on the day we declared war on Germany, it stars some of the most talented of our acting gene pool and is directed by Tom Hooper who made one of the best British films of the past five years, The Damned United.

But what really impresses is that this is no Merchant Ivory period drama, being, like the Brian Clough film, a warts and all slice of Englishness; of dilapidation as much as top hats and horse-drawn carriages.

Starting with the future king's painful address of the Empire Exhibition at Wembley Stadium in 1925 we follow Albert's (Colin Firth) and Elizabeth's (Helena Bonham Carter) attempts to cure his speech impediment with the help of maverick Australian speech therapist Lionel Logue (Geoffrey Rush).

A brilliantly documented relationship, it seems to embody national characteristics of aloof condescension meets an uncouth, rugged warmth before turning into something richer and more nuanced as

Aide: Elizabeth (Helena Bonham Carter) helps the King (Colin Firth)

Albert thaws, Logue's reconciliation and methods start to work, and we are enraptured by a quirky buddy movie.

What adds gravitas is the historical background which Hooper and screenwriter David Seidler paint so effortlessly. As Hitler starts to cause a stir in Europe, Albert's brother – the future Edward VIII – begins a relationship with Wallis Simpson that will eventually undermine his own monarchy resulting in abdication and Albert's unexpected coronation.

A film about a speech thus becomes a symbol of national pride and character as George VI attempts to conquer his demons and prove he is fit to lead us into war.

Rivalling his captivating performance in A Single Man, Firth is superb – a tortured combination of aristocratic hauteur and terrible fear of what will happen when he opens his mouth – while Rush is a heartwarming, idiosyncratic foil and Bonham Carter regal.

Burlesque (12A)

Stripping off has rarely been so mundane and predictable as in this cliché-ridden little tease.
Christina Aguilera has got the looks and the voice while Cher has the voice to make this a great soundtrack for a lame duck.

Megamind (PG)

Being bad can be rather brilliant in this super animated parody of the superhero flick. Cheer on the fiendish Megamind as he attempts to destroy the goody two shoes Metro Man with a succession of dastardly plans.

The American (15)

Based on Martin Booth's novel A Very Private Gentleman, George Clooney is the professional killer hiding out in a remote Italian town. For two thirds this grips like a vice but the final act is too formulaic.

Harry Potter And The Deathly Hallows Part One (12A)

More of an exercise in treading water before the dramatic splash of part two than a vintage Potter in its own right. Darker and older and away from Hogwarts this still has enough action adventure to provide an entertaining two and a half hours.

Model displays on show at Ally Pally

And you could win one of our five family tickets...

PLANES whizzing by... tanks rolling through the Great Hall... clouds of steam filling the air... it can only mean one thing – the London Model Engineering Exhibition is back.

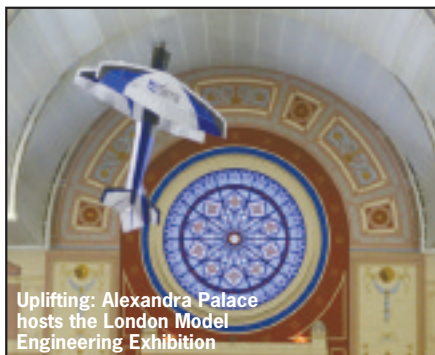

This buzzing hub of activity makes its return to Alexandra Palace in Wood Green from January 21 to January 23.

The largest modelling show in the UK is an enthusiast's dream of modelling from the more traditional model engineering, steam locomotives and traction engines through to the modern remote control modelling including tanks, boats, aeroplanes and helicopters alongside more than 70 specialist suppliers.

"Model engineering is a fantastic, hands-on hobby for people of all ages with numerous benefits," said organiser Avril Spence. "For the older generations it helps keep their minds active and for the younger it teaches them the valuable skills science and engineering."

Visitors can travel between the show's different zones, trying the hands-on activities and watching technical demonstrations to, hopefully, spark a life-time's passion.

The Model Active Zone features action displays from the British Model Flying Association, the UK Tank Club and Gauge 1 Model Railway Association while adults should enjoy an appearance by the Society Of Model And Experimental Engineers which will be introducing people to the hobby by letting them try their hand at lathe-turning and machining a small item which they can take away.

Uplifting: Alexandra Palace hosts the London Model Engineering Exhibition

For details and ticket prices call 01926 614 101 or go to www.meridienneexhibitions.co.uk

● We have five family tickets to give away (each family ticket admits two adults and two children). All you have to do is name Seal's model girlfriend.

Email competitions@nlhnews.co.uk or send your answer on a postcard along with your name, address and telephone number, to: Model Competition, The Haringey Advertiser, 4th Floor, Refuge House, 9-10 River Front, Enfield, EN1 3SZ.

Entries should reach us no later than next Wednesday and the first five correct postcards picked at random will win the tickets.

Out and about

● STAYING on the edge of cutting, Jacksons Lane hosts another new ensemble at its home on the Archway Road. Long Spoon presents its first full-length show, called H, next Friday and Saturday from 8pm. This young circus company stars four individuals colliding on stage to explore ideas of mass manipulation. Tickets £8. Call the box office on 020 8341 4421.

● DOMINIC FRISBY returns as the comedians' compere of choice, Downstairs at the King's Head this Saturday. The veteran stand-up once again aims to provide the glue between the acts at the popular venue underneath the Crouch End pub. John Newton, Kent Valentine, Holly Walsh, Earl Okin and Tony Law keep him and us amused from 8pm. Tickets £10 (£7 concs). Call the box office on 020 8340 1028.

● THE Millfield Arts Centre starts the new year with a laugh next Wednesday. Stephen K Amos is the funnyman performing at the Edmonton venue from 8pm. Fresh from a busy year fronting his own BBC2 comedy series, the rising star uses the Millfield gig as a warm-up for his latest national tour. Tickets £13. For details and reservations call the box office on 020 8807 6680.

gannets' restaurant of the year

Chow time for Gannets

THE Gannet Girls will be bingeing on a six-pack of premium restaurants over the next few weeks in a bid to find our Restaurant Of The Year 2010.

For the first time in its history the shortlist has expanded – like the gannets' waistlines – to double the normal amount of second-round contenders thanks to our decision to have the top two in each category go forward to the grand final.

Among the prestigious half a dozen are a few veterans, including three-times winner Hunters Of Cockfosters, while new kids on the block include The Jolly Farmers along with Whitewebbs House.

The most polled in our Asian category were Chez Tonton (winner 2007) Dipali, in Palmers Green, and serial runner-upper Chaseside Restaurant in Enfield.

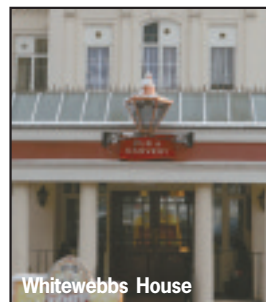

The top two in our Rest Of The World category were Chez Tonton (winner 2005) in New Barnet and the ever-present Hunters Of Cockfosters.

Last, but not least, The Jolly Farmers and Whitewebbs House in Enfield triumphed in the Pub Food section.

In all 38 different restaurants were nominated for the award in one of the most hotly fought-over competitions in London which next year celebrates its tenth anniversary.

The Gannet Girls now must suffer the arduous task of visiting all six over the next few weeks before announcing which is the one restaurant to rule them all in a few weeks' time.

We would like to thank the many hundreds of you who nominated your favourite restaurant in this year's competition and, if you happen to pop into one of the chosen six over the next few days, keep your eyes peeled. You never know who might be pecking away at the table next to you...

ATTENTION LANDLORDS!

BTC LETTINGS WILL MANAGE ALL YOUR PROPERTY HEADACHES FOR ONLY 5%

Wouldn't it be great if the only thing you had to do with letting your property was enjoy your monthly income?

- * Properties urgently required
- * 1-3 years guaranteed rent available
- * Tenants with full referencing and guarantors
- * Contracts with Australian - New Zealand teachers, Indian IT graduates
- * Property Inspection Report every three months

Rents we will achieve for your flat/house:

- ★ Studio £650 - £750;
- ★ 1 bed £750 - £800;
- ★ 2 bed £950 - £1050;
- ★ 3 bed £1200 - £1300;
- ★ 4 bed £1500 - £1700;
- ★ 5 bed £2000+

BTC Lettings market reviews:

- ★ With not many property owners wanting to sell in this market, there is an overspill of properties to let, here at BTC we have over 200 properties to let
 - ★ We are letting 1-3 properties a day - up to 50 a month, i.e. ONLY THE BEST SURVIVE!
 - ★ With hunting tenants having sooooo much choice, one thing is clear and very important. There is just too much competition, if you are thinking of letting your property, the condition/decoration will have to be of high standard, (laminare flooring would be a good tip!).
 - ★ Apart from poor condition, you may particularly struggle to find tenants if the property is above commercial property or in a high rise block.
 - ★ Landlords accepting tenants on housing benefit are achieving higher rent.
 - ★ Apart from gas safety certificate, all newly let properties must have an EPC certificate (Energy performance certificate).
- If you have any more questions/queries relating to letting your property or current letting market, please call us on 020 8889 7474

In Memoriam

MARIE LOUISE EVANS
9 November 1929 - 9 January 2009

*We little knew that morning,
God was going to call your name,
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.*

*It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
A part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.*

From Ron and your children Jenny, Shirly, Arthur and Alison and their families XXX

SPURS STILL AFTER BECKS

By Lee Husson

DAVID BECKHAM joined in his first training session with the Tottenham first-team squad yesterday, but it remains unclear whether the former England skipper will complete a short-term loan move to White Hart Lane.

The LA Galaxy midfielder completed a series of fitness tests at Spurs Lodge on Monday, having returned to the country last weekend after the end of the MLS season.

Beckham is reportedly keen on playing for Spurs before returning to Los Angeles ahead of their first game of the season against Seattle Sounders on March 15.

As things stand, the former Manchester United and Real Madrid star will only be at the club to train until February 10, with negotiations between Spurs and the Galaxy having reached an apparent impasse, although boss Harry Redknapp is hopeful a deal can be made.

One player looking forward to training with Beckham is youngster Andros

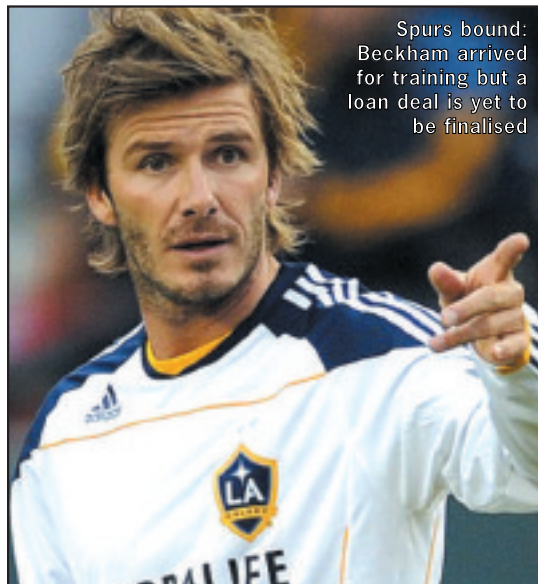

Townsend, who starred as a surprise inclusion in Tottenham's 3-0 FA Cup win over Charlton on Saturday.

The 19-year-old, who recently had his loan at Ipswich Town terminated, opened the scoring with a 20-yard strike and gave the Addicks' defence a torrid time all afternoon.

"It would be a massive boost for any youngster to have someone that is probably England's best ever player training with them," said Townsend. "He is one of my idols. He can teach me a lot, he could teach anyone in English football a lot. He is an amazing player and he has had a fantastic career."

He added: "I thought I played well when I was given the chance at Ipswich. I just took my form into the Charlton match and hopefully I have shown everyone here what I can do."

Meanwhile Spurs are reportedly in an "advanced stage" of talks to bring 34-year-old Everton skipper Phil Neville to White Hart Lane in a shock transfer swoop, while David Bentley is undergoing a medical at Birmingham.

Spurs bound: Beckham arrived for training but a loan deal is yet to be finalised

'Boro secure a goalless draw at Biggleswade

HARINGEY BOROUGH maintained their unbeaten start to 2011 as they played out an entertaining goalless draw at Biggleswade United in the Spartan Premier Division on Saturday.

Borough had the better of the opening exchanges, with Daniel Ailey having the first real chance of the game as he raced on to a through-ball and rounded the goalkeeper, but his touch took him too far wide and he was crowded out before he could get a shot away.

Biggleswade came into the game as the half wore on, but Borough keeper Brian Sealey had little to deal with, although he was forced to scramble across his goal as a header whistled just past his post.

The visitors enjoyed their best spell just before half-time, with Marvin Walker unlucky to see his 20-yard free-kick smash against the bar, before Tolu Popoola fired a shot against the post.

Jamie Brandon had a penalty shout waved away after appearing to have been clipped in the box after the break, but it was Biggleswade who had the late chances to snatch the win.

First an unmarked striker managed to blaze a shot over the bar from just yards out following a corner, before a defensive mix-up saw the returning Charlie Douse manage to head the ball past his own keeper Sealey, with Andreas Loizou chasing back to clear off the line ahead of two Biggleswade forwards.
